Summer SAT Preparation Courses

For the October 10 SAT Exam

The PTSA and The Princeton Review have teamed up to make SAT preparation a reality for all Aztec families. These programs ensure a convenient location, significantly reduced tuition for all families*, and multiple course options to suit any student and family.

* Financial Aid is also available and can cover up to 95% of all tuition fees. Contact The PrincetonReview for eligibility.

SAT Comprehensive Program:

As one of our most rigorous options, this program combines small class sizes with a demanding, 46 hour schedule that will ensure any student will walk into the October 10th exam confident and prepared. Students will take four full-length SAT's throughout the course and receive an additional 30 hours of intensive instruction with an expert Princeton Review instructor. While not for the faint of heart, students completing this course improve and average of more than 240 points.

Why Choose The Princeton Review?

Here are some quick, great reason why The Princeton Review is your #1 choice for SAT preparation:

- PHILOSOPHY: Our techniques approach the exam from two different perspectives: Content & Technique. Other companies focus on content alone or even worse, brainless drilling.
- PROVEN RESULTS: Only two companies (Princeton Review & Kaplan) have ever submitted their scores for independent review. We consistently score higher than the competition with over 240 points of average improvement.
- TEACHERS: Some say it is harder to become a Princeton Review teacher than it is to score a 2400 on the SAT. Our instructors receive 3-4 weeks of live training with absolutely no videos involved.
- CUSTOMER SERVICE: Most of the people on our full-time staff are teachers too, which means you will not find a more knowledgeable group of people here to answer your questions and ensure you're enrolling in the program that is best suited to your student.
